3. What is a Cookie?

A cookie is a small text file placed on your hard drive by a web page server. Cookies contain information that a web server can later read in the domain that issued the cookie to you. Some cookies will be used if you use certain features or select specific preferences and cookies used. You can learn more about each cookie by viewing our current list below. We update this list quarterly, so there may be additional not yet listed cookies. In addition, web beacons, tags, and scripts may be used in the Websites or emails to help us deliver cookies, count visits, understand usage and campaign effectiveness, and determine whether an email has been opened and acted upon. We may receive reports based on these technologies from our service/analytics providers individually and collectively.

Many jurisdictions require or recommend that website operators inform users/visitors about the nature of cookies they utilize and, in certain circumstances, obtain the consent of their users to the placement of certain cookies. The Websites include third-party social media features, such as the Facebook Like button, and third-party widgets, such as the 'Share This button or interactive mini-programs that run on the Websites. These features may collect your IP address and which page you visit on the Websites and set a cookie to enable the feature to function correctly. The third-party company's privacy policy governs your interaction with these features.

We may use any of the following categories of cookies on the Websites as detailed below.

Each cookie falls within one of the four categories:

Category	Description
1. Essential Cookies	2. Essential cookies are sometimes called "strictly necessary" as we cannot provide many services you need on the Websites without them. For example, essential cookies help you remember your preferences as you move around the Websites.
3. Analytics Cookies	4. These cookies track information about website visits to make improvements and report our performance. For example: analyze visitor and user behavior to provide more relevant content or suggest certain activities. They collect information about how visitors use the Websites, which site the user came from, the number of each user's visits, and how long a user stays on them. We might also use analytics cookies to test new ads, pages, or features to see how users react.
5. Functionality or Preference Cookies	6. During your visit to the Websites, cookies are used to remember information you have entered or choices you make (such as your username, language, or region). They also store your preferences when personalizing the Websites to optimize your use of IJCorp, for example, your preferred language. These preferences are remembered through persistent cookies; the next time you visit the Websites, you will not have to set them again.

7. Targeting or Advertising Cookies

8. These cookies are third-party advertising platforms or networks to deliver ads and track ad performance, enabling advertising networks to deliver advertisements that may be relevant to you based on your activities (this is sometimes called "behavioral" or "targeted" advertising) on the Websites. They may subsequently use information about your visit to target advertising you may be interested in on the Websites and other websites. For example, these cookies remember which browsers have visited the Websites.
